Thinking Resilience: Do you have a fallback plan for your Workspace?

An alternate work area is one of the most critical pieces of any recovery plan. After all, if your workforce has no place to work, how can you recover? Events that require a backup site can include a terrorist threat, fire, flood, or other natural and man-made disaster events. Your work area recovery site is essential and integral to your business continuity planning.

Before you measure each option, it's important to determine the basic needs for your alternate work site. Your next step is to establish your priorities so that you make your selection based on what's important to your branch operations. Also, be sure to choose a location far enough away from the existing office so as not to be impacted by the same event.

Cyber Hacks: Ransomware

Ransomware is a type of malware designed to encrypt files on a device, rendering any files and the systems that rely on them unusable. Ransomware incidents can impact business processes and leave organizations without the data to operate and deliver mission-critical services.

Victims are often notified on a lock screen to purchase a cryptocurrency, like Bitcoin, to pay the ransom fee. The two types of ransomware that are very popular are Locker and Crypto.

Locker blocks essential computer functions and Crypto encrypts important data, such as documents, pictures, and videos, but does not interfere with essential computer functions.

How to better protect yourself against ransomware:

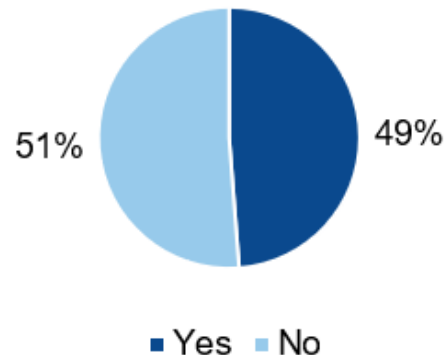

- Never click on unsafe links
- Avoid disclosing personal sensitive information
- Do not open suspicious email attachments
- Never use unknown USB sticks
- Use VPN services on public Wi-Fi networks
